A COURT BALL IN FLORENCE. The Florence correspondent of the London Times gives the following entertaining account of a grand ball given by the King of Sardinia on the evening of April 21 :-

I know not whether it was my sense of duty as a newspaper correspondent, or the desire to see the State apartments at the Petti Palace lighted up, but I allowed myself to be persuaded to be one of the 5000 who accepted the honor of His Sardinian Majesty's gracious invitation to the Grand Court Ball last evening. Familiar as he must daily become with the idea that this sudden and vast accession of fortune is no idle dream of his fancy, the good Soldier-King must be tempted to exclaim, with the Dodge of Genoa, among ail the pomp and circumstance which surrounded him at the Louvre, that " the greatest wonder of all for him, is to see himself here." Thanks to the good taste of the Marquis Ridolfi, who was trusted with the care of the Royal demesnes during the interregnum, not a pin has been touched at the Palazzo Pitti, so that one might almost expect at any moment to see the castaway Grand Duke step in and do the honors of what was so lately his house. Carpets and mirror frames and ornaments of every description still bear the famous cognizance of the balls, or "pills," of the Medici, quartered with, I believe, the "fishes" of Lorraine. The livery servants, a motley crew, wore the color of the new no less than of the old master indiscriminately, and the collar of the Annunziata and the green scarf of St. Maurice, the ziata and the green scarf of St. Maurice, the Savoy badges of knighthood, were hardly Chincha & Sombrero Islands. more frequent than the scarlet uniform, the Tuscan order of St. Stephen's. Old Tuscany, in short, had blended with, without merging into, Young Italy. The King did not throw aside, but bravely put on his predecessor's "old shoes." And what a glorious pair of shoes it is! One of the most wicked ble, by the addition of Sulphosis and This scions of the profligate House of Medici, plyed by his confessor on his deathbed with arguments drawn from imaginary pictures of the joys of Paradise, wearied with the flaming description of "marble halls" and "fragrant bowers," cut short the exhortation with the modest remark, "For myself, I am quite willing to put up with the Boboli Gardens." Those Gardens and the palace they belong to are quite the thing to put a prince out of conceit with death to all eternity. That palace which a mere steward or counting-house clerk built; which a banker improved, and to which eighteen generations of vicious, but elegant despots, almost daily | Price $50 per Ton of 2,000 lbs. added every treasure that Italian genius contributed to the realm of the beautiful-that | FERTILIZER to their crops last fall, are highly palace, only second to the Vatican in antique monuments, second to none in modern embellishments-that palace comes to the inheritance of a Prince of Savoy, without his striking one blow for it, simply in remuner- exhaust than permanently improve the soil. ation of his "acquaintance with the nature of an oath," of his or his father's timely compliance with the signs of the times. Nor this palace alone, but the hundred villas, castles, and hunting lodges which the wayward fancy of idle royalty embellished, Poggio Imperiale, Pratolino, La Petrair, and ever so many between the Appenines and the mediteranean; then, besides the Tuscan, all the town and country abodes of extinct or LUBLE PHOSPHATE OF LIME, Petash, Seeffete magnificence at Lucca, Massa, Medena, da, and Magnesia, forming the most concentrated and Parma, the pomp and luxury of Far- and durable FERTILIZER ever offered to the nese and Este, of Cybo and Bourbon, to- Farmer, combining all the stimulating properties gether with remnants of the splendar of Vis- of Peruvian Guano, and the durable fertilizing conti, Sforza, and Gonzaga, -all this gives properties of Ground Boncs-supplying an abunthe crown property of the new Italian Kingdom such an unparalled extent, wealth, and variety, that the king must pray for a long of his recent acquisitions. Well, but as to the Pitti Ball! Why, the invitation was for 9 o'clock. I went at halfpast 8, and found a crowd already. I have along with a great mass of uniforms and black coats, of a slow, tedious, stifling progress through a narrow avenue, fenced in on either side by two great masses of black coats and uniforms, with here and there a little mountain of white muslin and gauze ; I have | Farmer. an indistinct recollection of being thus jammed in for an hour or so, mob-mob-mob -crush-crush-crush; carried by the tide from a thronged antichamber into more thronged saloons, and thence into a still more closely packed ballroom: issuing forth, after a long agony, into scarcely less choking eardrooms and galleries, going thus twice and thrice through these almost compulsory evolutions, till a lull in the storm enabled me to exercise my free will, when, after a brisk skirmish for my hat and cloak, I was but too glad to find myself outside the gate, and to go home to bed before midnight. Ask me not what I saw besides. I heard nouncing the King's arrival. I had some peeps at him as he stood up erect in a corner of the ballroom-erect with his head thrown backwards, in that attitude with which a million busts have made us familiar, but with that good-natured, good-humored extaller and even portlier figure, but no less varied assortment of bland and serene. I descried among his FARMING IMPLEMENTS. suite Farina, Buoncompagni, Corsi, and a few gentlemen of his Cabinet and household. I noticed his glance towards us poor wights, pounded to a jelly in the fray. I fancied in variety of the comparitive case and security of his tem- | PLOWS AND CASTINGS, porary harbor, he felt pity for us poor mariners, tossed about in that mari magno, and the sly remarks he addressed to his Home | Horse Powers and Threshing Machines, Minister, I could almost bet referred to the grief poor crinoline must come to in the | Reaping and Mowing Machines, swarm of that flounce-levelling multitude. Anon he passed me in the galleries, as, preceded by a single usher, and followed by his retinue, he launched into the vortex and accomplished the tour of the apartments, when, Herds Grass Seed, &c. I dare say- though I do not positively GUANO, BONE DUST. know it-if he was the wise King I always took him for, he undoubtedly followed my example, withdrew from the melec, and left his 5000 guests, masters of the battle-field.

What more can I tell you? Suppers are not in my way, and fair ladies were only so in days of yore. Florentine beauty did not certainly muster to advantage last night. Two English lasses bore off the palm easily.
